1. Upon his return from the Czechoslovak-Polish treaty signing ceremonies in Warsaw, Hubert Ripka, Minister of Foreign Trade, declared that some men in the Polish Government openly dislike the treaty and are accepting it only because of Soviet pressure.
2. Although General Svoboda was with the Czechoslovak delegation to lay foundations for military implementation of the treaty, he accomplished nothing that could be reported to his Government.
3. It is mutually and tacitly understood by both parties to the treaty that the pact does not affect respective border claims.
